Role of the Defence School Mentor

My name is Selina Richardson-Gill and as the Defence School Mentor (DSM) at St Augustine's College.

My role as DSM assists both students and families along this journey as well as raising awareness within the school community of the Defence experience and how it impacts our students and their education. I teach strategies around friendships, dealing with difficult times and emotions. Where student needs fall outside the assistance I can provide, students will be referred to resources within the school or external agencies as required.

As well as student interactions, I regularly contribute articles to our school newsletter, personalised emails to Defence families as well as working with teachers and support staff to support defence students.
